

Publications and Communications

Ipas is an international nongovernmental organization that has worked for nearly three decades to reduce abortion-related deaths and injuries and to increase women's ability to exercise their sexual and reproductive rights. Ipas's global and country programs include training, research, advocacy, distribution of reproductive health technologies, and information dissemination.

Ipas's Communications Unit – based at the organization's central office in Chapel Hill, North Carolina – produces a range of technical and nontechnical materials, including training curricula, programmatic updates, factsheets for policy advocacy, policy analyses and research reports. Our principal audiences are local, national and international health policymakers, health-care providers, health-program managers, USAID Cooperating Agencies and other international nongovernmental organizations working in the field of reproductive health.

The attached catalogue insert lists recent publications and other materials in English, Spanish and Portuguese. Most are available for free download on the Ipas website, www.ipas.org.
